<sup>1</sup> New loans to households and non-financial corporations do not include restructured loans. Similarly, the effects of government bridging loans are eliminated from the values of new housing loans and general purpose loans to households. (For more details, see the methodological notes.)

<sup>2</sup> Act XC of 2010, which prohibits banks from registering a mortgage under a foreign currency loan, entered into force on 14 August 2010. This has been reflected in a decline in foreign currency lending. The greater-than-zero amount of new foreign currency lending is explained by the opportunity to redenominate foreign currency loans disbursed earlier or transfer of debt. (For more details, see the methodological notes.)

Average interest rates on forint loans to the non-financial corporate sector of up to and over the equivalent of EUR 1 million fell.<sup>3</sup> Average interest rates on euro loans of over EUR 1 million also fell, while those on euro loans of up to EUR 1 million rose.

New business of forint loans to the non-financial corporate sector of up to the equivalent of EUR 1 million fell slightly and that of loans of over the equivalent of EUR 1 million declined sharply relative to the previous month. New business of euro loans to non-financial corporations of up to EUR 1 million fell and that of euro loans of over EUR 1 million increased.

Average interest rates on non-financial corporations' forint deposits declined and those on euro deposits were unchanged. New business of both forint and euro deposits decreased.

DIRECTORATE STATISTICS

<sup>3</sup> In June–August 2013, new business of loans with floating interest rates or with up to 1 year initial rate fixation also included a small amount of loans granted under the FGS, which led to lower interest rates in the period. The increase in the average interest rate on forint loans of up to EUR 1 million is explained by the fact that new business of forint loans in September no longer contained loans granted under the FGS.
